VANCOUVER ISLAND

Whales, wilderness and wine.

On your short and scenic ferry trip to this island of history and romance you may be accompanied by magnificent orcas, playful otters and mischievous gulls. Your destination is one of the most rugged and unspoiled parts of Canada and the home of a new breed of winemakers. The typical Island winery is a family-based operation displaying a passion for turning grapes into good times. The inland Cowichan Valley and southeastern Saanich Peninsula provide a variety of conditions perfect for experimentation and the growing and nurturing of an eclectic array of sought-after labels.

Look for varietals including Pinot Noir, Merlot, Ortega and Chardonnay.

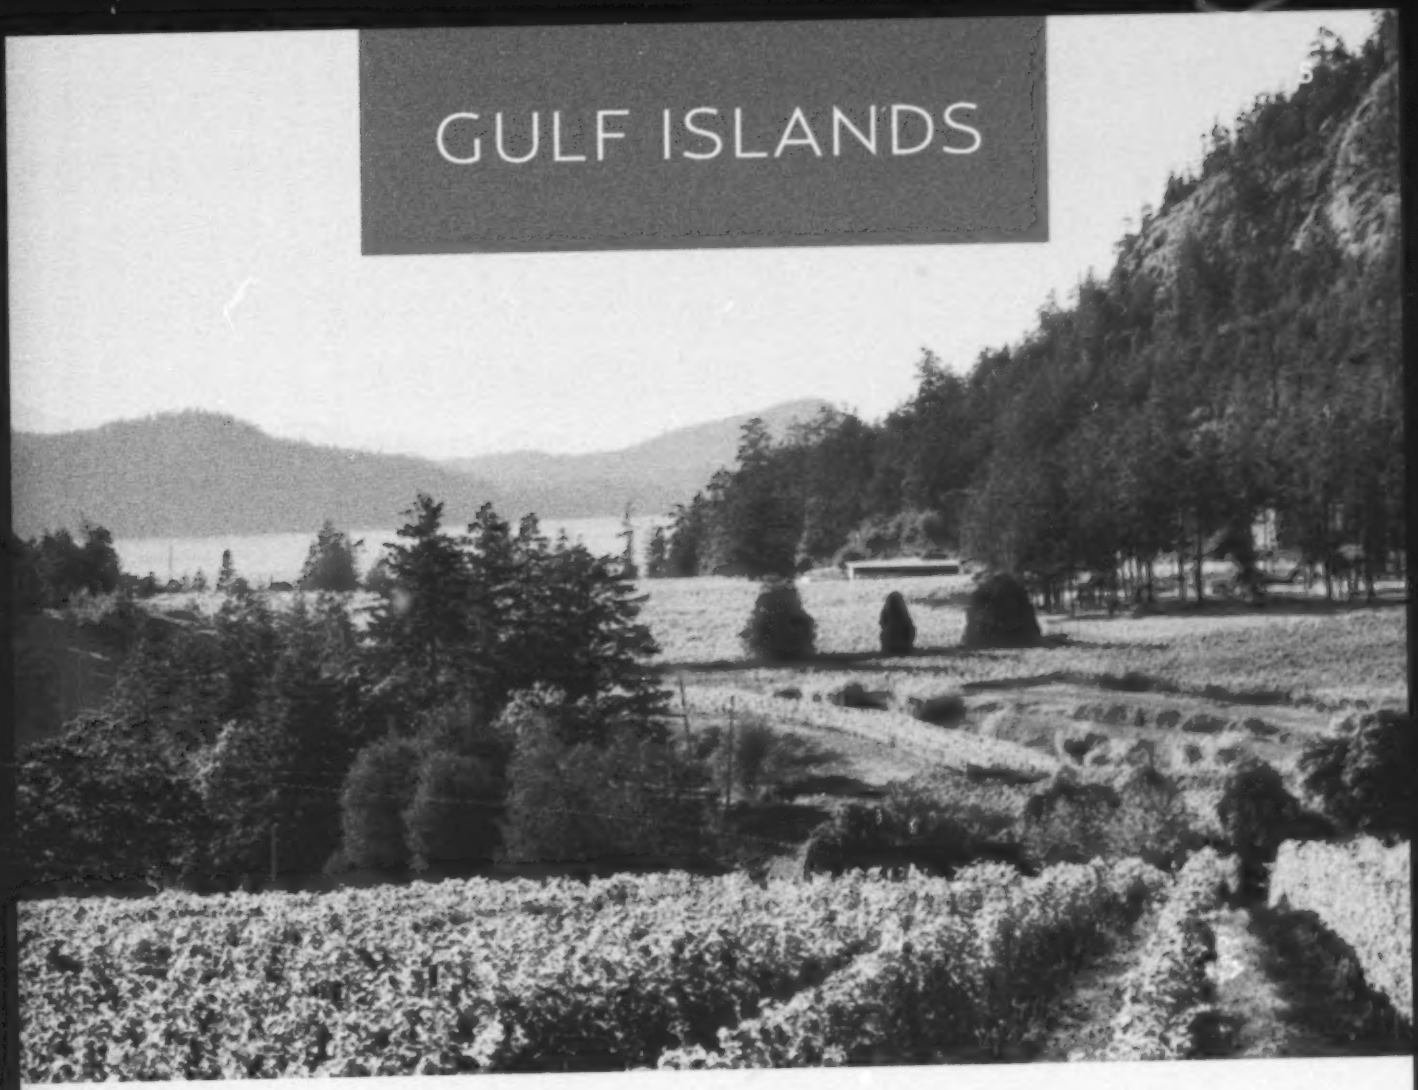
GULF ISLANDS



A ferry-tale adventure.

Their names read like wine labels. Salt Spring, Pender, Saturna, Quadra and Hornby. British Columbia's Gulf Islands lie in the Georgia Strait that separates Vancouver Island from the mainland and are connected by a network of small ferries. The residents reflect a simpler time when help was as near as a neighbour, hopefully one with an unopened bottle and corkscrew. This timeless attitude carries over to the unique varieties of the region, wines that appeal more to the palate than to pretence. This wine-producing region brings tradition, enduring values and passion to the shared pleasures of fine wines and good friends.

Look for varietals including Pinot Noir, Pinot Gris, Riesling and Chardonnay.

FRASER VALLEY

Here's to the rural life.

The Fraser Valley is Vancouver's backyard: a rural paradise stretching for nearly a hundred miles from the west coast and one of the world's most spectacular cities. The Valley offers an unforgettable look into a thriving agricultural community. Over half of the province's agricultural activity is centred here and includes vineyards dedicated to some of the most popular and acclaimed wine labels. In the time since the first Fraser Valley winery opened in 1991, local growers have developed and nurtured a region especially suited to early-ripening varietals.

Look for varietals including Chardonnay, Pinot Noir and Germanic white grapes.

OKANAGAN
VALLEY

Where the sun comes to play.

The Coastal and Monashee mountain ranges shelter the Okanagan Valley from wet weather and create hot and dry, top-down summers. Long daylight hours lead to prolonged photosynthesis and late ripening while gentle winds and the magnificent Okanagan Lake moderate a harsh winter. The roads connecting the laid-back cities and towns within the area are as full of pleasant surprises as the wines they bring you to, from vintners who respect tradition without blindly following it.

The Okanagan Valley is an ever changing panorama stretching over 270 kilometres across ten distinct sub-regions, each with different soil and climate conditions suited to a growing range of varietals.

Look for varietals from Pinots and Chardonnays to Syrah and Zinfandel.

SIMILKAMEEN
VALLEY

A river runs through it.

The spectacular Similkameen Valley is bordered by steep mountains stretching from west of the Okanagan Valley to the United States border. Back in the 1800s, the river running through it gave up gold to wash prospectors. Today the valley's treasure is found in fertile land and a climate perfect for the production of wines as fine as any in the world. The Cathedral Mountains hold the highest peak and deepen the contrasts that abound in the night. Grasslands upended and crumpled by rich glacial soils still bear witness from glacial ice.

Look for varietals including Merlot, Gamay Noir, Cabernet Franc and Chardonnay, along with some very fine Meritage and Cassocontentieux.

SIP TIPS

LOOK Tip the glass and look below you, could it be red, blue, or green? Is it clear, or hazy? Is it watery, or thick? Are there bubbles, or maybe even sediment? Observe the colour and intensity of the wine.

SMELL Take a moment to smell the wine. Is it fruity, floral, or maybe even earthy? Does it remind you of anything? Is it pleasant, or unpleasant? Swirling the wine in the glass helps release the aromas in the wine. What do you smell? Sugar, cloves, apricot, plum or blueberries?

TASTE Take a sip of the wine and swish it around your mouth. Is it sweet, or dry? Is it bitter, or sour? Is it smooth, or rough? Is it light, or heavy? Is it acidic, or flat? Is it fruity, or spicy? Is it salty, or bland? Take a small amount of the wine in your mouth and suck in air as if to cool the wine down. Is it pleasant, or unpleasant? Is it balanced, or unbalanced? Is it complex, or simple? Is it smooth, or rough? Is it warm, or cool? Is it fruity, or spicy? Is it salty, or bland?
